

A New Breakthrough in Full Body Scans

As you may know, full body scans are among us and have been controversial, due to the amount of radiation exposure involved, the facility performing the scans, and the interpretation of the information.

What if a person could receive a full body scan with no radiation, find out how all the organ systems are doing from skin to immune system and receive a strategy for supporting these body systems, having no side affects, but health-building benefits?? Sounds too good to be true, well, now there is something called MSA testing that is exactly that. MSA testing (Meridian Stress Assessment) or BIM testing (Bioelectrical Impedance Measuring) is the terminology used to name a process that's based on over 3000 years of research, combined with the latest in computer technology.

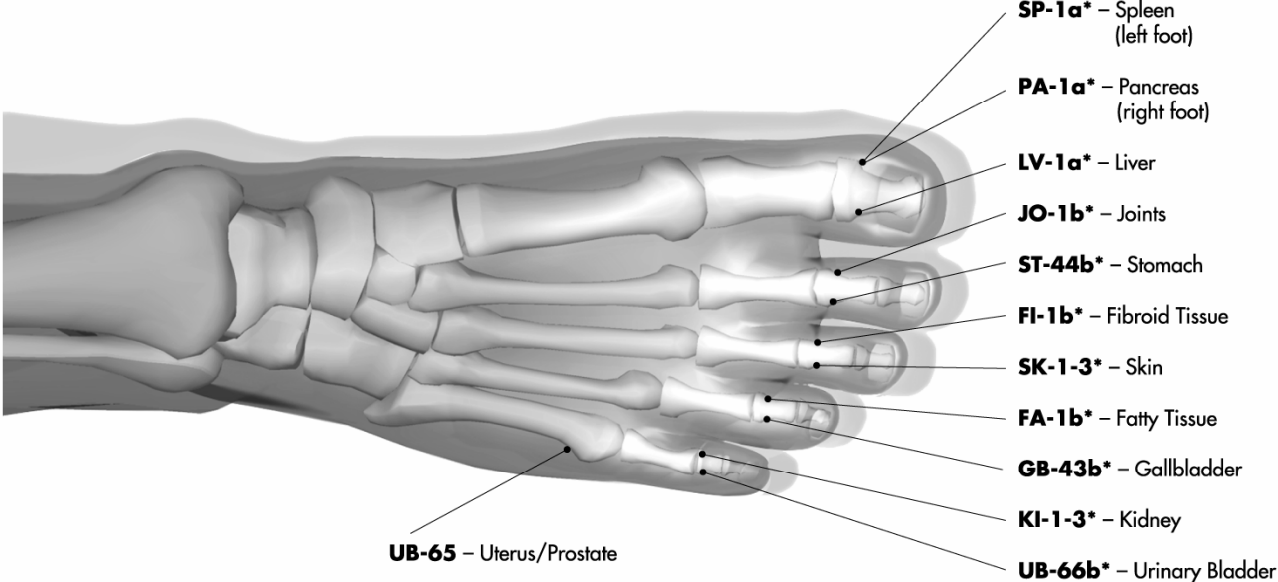

Does it diagnose disease? No, it does not. That's for medical doctors. My approach in healthcare is to find dysfunction in the body, before failure. This technology is designed to measure electrical flow through acupuncture meridian points that correspond to organ systems in the body.

I have been looking at and watching the technology of meridian stress assessment (MSA) or Bioelectrical Impedance measuring (BIM) for many, many years, and Biomeridian has developed the absolute best technology (Epic probe and Bioreportorization), with the most highly accurate Meridian Stress Assessment (MSA) for supporting people towards wellness.
